Personal Data Privacy Checklist

Ten habits that keep your data safer

Tick each habit once you have done it. Review the list every month.

| Done | Habit | Why it matters |
|---|---|---|
| ☐ | Review app permissions every month and remove any an app does not need. | Apps only need data for their stated purpose. |
| ☐ | Use a unique password and two-step verification for email and banking. | A hacked email account gives access to everything else. |
| ☐ | Read the purpose line before giving consent on any form. | Consent must be informed, so know what you are saying yes to. |
| ☐ | Untick pre-ticked marketing and sharing boxes. | Consent needs a clear action from you. |
| ☐ | Share Aadhaar only where it is truly required, and use a masked copy. | Give the least sensitive ID that works. |
| ☐ | Keep location off unless an app needs it right now. | Location shows where you live, study and travel. |
| ☐ | Never paste real personal data into AI chatbots. | Prompts may be stored; use made-up examples. |
| ☐ | Avoid public Wi-Fi for banking and logins. | Open networks are easier to snoop on. |
| ☐ | Report scams or breaches to the company, and cyber incidents to CERT-In. | Quick reports limit the damage. |
| ☐ | Ask apps to delete your data when you stop using them. | Uninstalling does not delete what the company holds. Use your right to erasure. |

Your rights when something goes wrong: ask the organisation for your data summary (S.11), ask for correction or erasure (S.12), complain to its grievance contact (S.13), and if unresolved, approach the Data Protection Board of India. Legal status in this document: the DPDP Act was passed on 11 August 2023. The DPDP Rules, 2025 were notified on 13 November 2025. Board provisions began at once, consent manager rules follow about 13 November 2026, and the remaining provisions, including the data rights and penalties, are due about 13 May 2027.
