Before and After Analysis

What changed after verification and editing

Item	Before (first draft or raw source)	After (verified)	Why it changed
Legal status	“The Act is fully operational.”	Rules notified 13 Nov 2025. Rights and penalties due about 13 May 2027.	Sources show phased commencement.
Website home note	Said most duties follow in phases up to about 18 months.	Names the dates: 13 Nov 2025, about 13 Nov 2026, about 13 May 2027.	A reader needs the actual dates to plan.
Section numbers	Right to nominate listed as Section 12 in one source.	Right to nominate is Section 14; erasure is Section 12.	Checked against the Act’s structure.
Penalty wording	One figure for every breach.	₹250 crore for safeguards; up to ₹200 crore for breach notice and children’s data.	The Schedule has separate amounts.
Plain language	“The Data Fiduciary shall obtain verifiable consent of the parent of a child.”	“If you are under 18, the app must get your parent’s clear consent.”	Short, direct sentences students can act on.
Consent example	“Consent is required.”	“A pre-ticked box is not a clear action. Untick it.”	A concrete example is easier to remember.
AI use	Paste a real marksheet into a chatbot.	Use a made-up sample.	No real personal data in prompts.

Readability

The first plain-language draft used long legal sentences. The final explainer uses short sentences, defines each key word once, and gives one example for each rule. This makes the material easier to scan and easier to quiz.

What improved

- Dates and section numbers now match the Act’s structure and the timeline.
- Every rule has an everyday example.
- Every AI-generated number was checked before use.
